

Public Notice

If you suffer from epileptic fits or other known sensory overload conditions be forthwith forewarned that reading this article could be hazardous to your heath. proceed with caution.

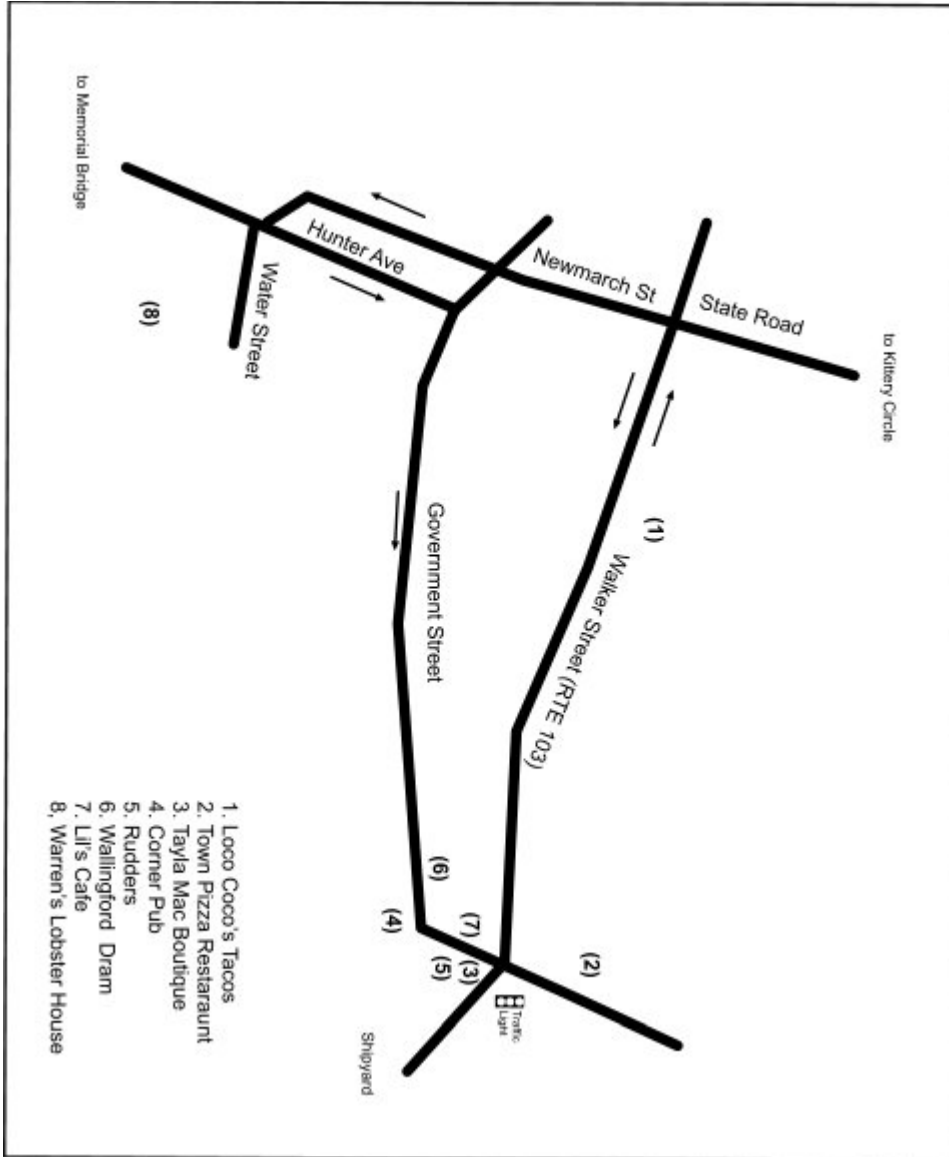

This is an articulation of ownership. The reward was posted and yet it was warned within of the bold precedent of private property, in that permission to acquire would have to be included for the acceptance of the reward money.

In this case Mr F. versus the potential involvements which would include the inviolable ( or barely credible) rights precluded by property ownership. We see a contestable circumstance of private intellectual gain versus the inviolable rights of ownership, so much so; that this case might be actually stellar in its presentation.

A particular meteorite, being a fallen rock due to implisions of space energy, and other matters of unknowable reasoning, was found by intellectual observation to such degree as being worth a reward. Though its precarious being was positioned as it fell on an iron grate, under a tree, on the sidewalk of the Foreside, Kittery Maine. On April 18 of the year 2023.

If the finding be of such that a rock was removed from the sidewalk in the Name of Safety, does this put the town in a position of legal perplexity, whereby the rock as identified as a safety concern ( as a material foreign to the safe walking or biking or other means of transportation, pertinent to clean and debris-less sidewalks. Is this common area, contested or is it deemed a free area. The area in question is used inadvertently or by permission granted by the subtle degrees of either omission or by a free will concern which allows tables outside on the sidewalk tho clearly no true ownership exists as it is a public sidewalk, but used yearly by the restaurant to accommodate outside sitting. Clearly, definitive ownership is abandoned by the town in this case or the town would be directly responsible for patrons sitting at the table having lunch. If the ownership and authority in the case of the restaurant has been curbed it allows for drinking in public which is against the law. Though the owner owns the restaurant he does not own the sidewalk, unless in fact he does but that point is not arbitrated in this discussion, tho legally it could be as a result of legal meandering, or wandering around the finer points of legal involution, which is not being entered here.

So the rock unto itself is not a piece of material benefiting man or beast in any context and its removal would henceforth be granted by the general concept of removing unwanted debris that easily could be tripped over especially by an indolent drinker at the table outside.

Purely by observation, the new owner of the rock removed the rock to a place of safe keeping in his abode where rent is paid and thenceforth becoming private property by the basic law, of public safety and the concern of the population. Further noting in finite detail that the item was not placed there for decoration or purpose of examination by the property owner, nor was it placed there under any engagement of any person associated with the town or state. Therefore the piece was not dispensed by an original owner and it was there merely days prior to its recovery. Therefore in a sense its a rock of stellar victimization and picking it up is paramount to saving its "life" as a meteorite and a living legacy as such. Apparently and unknowingly Mr. F has found a sphere unrecognized and ungoverned by law such as being and could be called the Society For The Protection of Credible Meteorites (SPCM)

THE UNKNOWNING POET

METEOR MIGHT METEORITE
GEOLOGIC FIND

HALT.

IS IT BUT BASALT?
FEW DOULD QUESTION.
SO DON'T.