

No More Time

Our very own Viva Kittery "standards and operations" reporter, v Sim Hilsum is reporting on a new govt operation which involves separation of Church and state.

Recently, the department of standards and operations has learned that the Church developed the calendar and subsequently the "days" of the week.

The Czar of standards has declared that we are "separating" from the Calendar, and subsequently the days of the week. Now with a new app called "day bro", the government will provide you with a daily message as to "what day it is".

This is wonderful news for government workers but a little dispelling for "normal folks" he admits. For instance you don't have to "know" what time it is anymore. We tell you "its time to go work" and then a bell rings (at some point in time" and you get a message... " its time to go home".

Of course there are millions of little details involved in this and will take probably two or three generations of people to get used to the new program but we are looking forward to its success.

There is a follow up to this new story but for the meantime... lets say its five day and its time to go to work!@ We will let you know when you can go home.. sometime... but watch for the follow up story because this is better than living like a bird on the wing!! In the meantime download " day bro" and get started on your new life!!!
