

Deer Me

Hunting may well be a neolithic sport soon to be outdated and done away with.

Some examples are blatant in the hunting magazines where you see people in camouflage, and war paint armed to the teeth only to find them sitting near the local “pet a deer farm” .. Mind you, these are “warriors” who get Novocaine for a small cavity, use hair dye at the sign of gray hair, and have an epileptic fit when they get a speeding ticket ... and so on and so on.

Now with the advent of laser tag, and the fact that almost every animal has a tracking tag on it.. the two realities are being melded into the new hunting gala event that will be called laser hunting. Now with a laser gun you can shoot animals from your car and rack up the points online. When enough points are gathered you can get a can of Dinty Moore “game stew” to froth over at the bar, with rest of the people who yak continuously about hunting.

Another great example is the fact that turkeys roam freely through your yard at numbers in areas which its hard to avoid being near one while 40 feet away in the under brush there's a guy with a double pump shotgun chortling out fake turkey calls to lure them 40 feet from you into firing range. Are you kidding me? Stop the press and stop printing hunting magazines that get people this crazy..please!!

Simply go online to Big City Jim approved hunting by laser and find the new world of laser hunting where you can shoot at just about anything and get the rewards of the hunting hero while actually letting the last few animals survive in between urban chaos and a warming planet.

So when people stop pretending they need guns to “survive” in wilderness conditions..make sure those people actually live in Alaska where no modern man really has ever been. Other than that try to enjoy running water, electricity, TV and video games and put your raccoon cap back in the closet until the planet really is done with civilization.

And after that, your gonna run out of ammo anyway so start learning to make Neville points.. ( arrowheads) .. Thank you for considering laser hunting as the modern way to be the warrior of your dreams.. so to speak..

I leave this with LOL, because it should be funny, but if it's not funny its probably sadder than anyone wants to admit. LOL LOL..
