

Infinitely Impossible

Viva Kittery's very own reporter..Sly Drimpson, reporter on "scary stuff" has come up with a Halloween special that has everyone on edge.

Apparently ..Sly has found that there is a person who has lodged a legal patent at the patent office that might actually be a patent on everything...sort of..

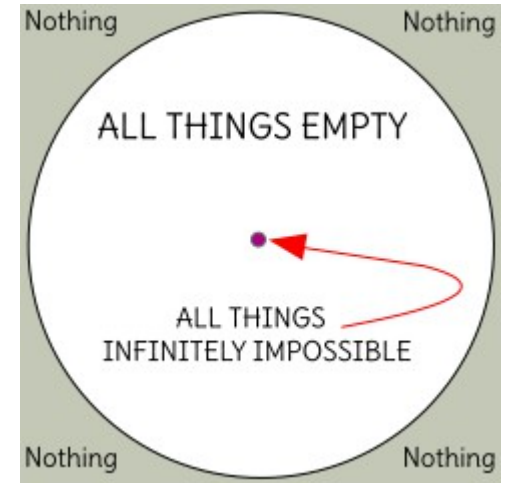

Sly revealed that this new "patent" seemed to include everything that exists as well as everything as a whole.

I read the schematics ..and I as a reporter.. have to agree that the guy has something here... sort of...shy of anything he has covered everything!

Sly said.. i smuggled the patent info out and showed it to a lot of dentists.. 4 out of 5 dentists agreed.. so ..that's gotta mean something.

He continued.. i showed the patent idea.. pending patent idea.. to a lot of people. Among these people.. the people who manufacture things under patent law.. the people who make boxes are extremely concerned..

The international box spokesman stated... if this guy has a patent on empty space we ate ruined!

Sly said.. it appears.... he does.. the dentists were concerned they could not fill the "empty space" known as cavities without paying a stipend!

Other people were concerned too. Actually anyone who patented a "shape" found that they infringed on empty space because they could not show the perfection of their shape and therefore any "minute" difference in shape was an infringement on empty space! An odd but interesting problem.

By patenting empty space it challenges the field of differentiation .. that which is not perfect "legally by definition" and narrows the scope of patents in general to infinitely impossible..if you will.

Yeah Sly said.. we gonna continue the investigation but it looks like patent theory just took a bullet.. LOL